

WHICH ONE IS THE HoneyBell?

HoneyBells that grow close to the trunk have a thicker skin and almost always have the characteristic “bell” on top. Those that grow toward the outside end of the limb have thinner skins and often don’t have the “bell.”

Even if some of the HoneyBells you receive don’t have the bell shape, they are genuine HoneyBells. Guaranteed!

Most HoneyBells, about 80%, are seedless, but if some of yours have seeds, blame the bees (we are not making this up).

Sometimes the honeybees pick up pollen from the seeded varieties of oranges and grapefruit growing in nearby groves and carry it to the HoneyBell trees. The result is seeds in some of our HoneyBells. Luckily, the seeds don’t change the delectable sweetness and extraordinary juiciness of your unforgettable HoneyBells.

Neither does the appearance. HoneyBells may have some wind scarring on the rind, which is perfectly normal, but inside they are still delicious. They can range in color from slightly green to fiery orange because their vibrant colors only develop when there are cool nights. Don’t worry... Even a green HoneyBell can be ripe and flavorful!

Remember, no matter what your HoneyBell may look like, we just know you’ll enjoy every sensational bite.

Please Note

Your fruit may be coated with food-grade vegetable-, petroleum-, beeswax-, and/or shellac-based wax or resin to maintain freshness.

If you answered A, B, or C, you’re correct! All three are HoneyBells!

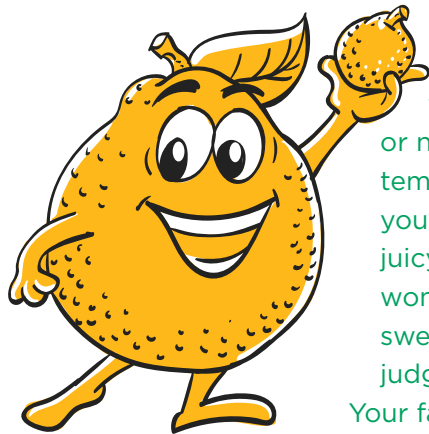

A TRADITION OF DELICIOUS FRUIT SINCE 1945

THE SWEETEST WAY TO ENJOY Juicy-Sweet HoneyBells

ENJOYING THE HoneyBell EXPERIENCE

1. Introducing legendary Cushman's® HoneyBells

Now that you've received your incredible citrus fruit, you have a dilemma—whether you want to share or not. Although you might be tempted to keep them all for yourself, after your first sweet, juicy, HoneyBell, we think you won't be able to keep such a sweet secret. Of course, no judgment if you can.

Your family, friends, and neighbors will reward you handsomely for sharing this exceptional citrus with them.

They'll shower you with thank yous and smiles, and they'll never forget your generosity.

2. Put on Your Bib.

HoneyBell lovers know that the bib is not just for show. If you're experiencing the World's Only Limited Edition Fruit® for the first time, we recommend you wear a bib—this delicious citrus fruit is extraordinarily juicy.

3. Dive in and Enjoy!

Let the HoneyBell juice run down your chin and off your elbows—the sweet taste of sunshine is well worth it.

